

Barton LLP Expands Its Litigation and White Collar Defense Practice with the Addition of James E. Heavey

Barton LLP is pleased to announce that James E. Heavey, formerly with Stevens & Lee, has joined the firm as a Partner in its Litigation Practice.

An accomplished litigator, James currently represents financial institutions, broker-dealers, executives and individual advisors in federal and state litigation, arbitration, regulatory proceedings and investigations.

James has represented board members, managing directors and executives of leading Fortune 500 firms in the highly regulated financial services, investment advisory and healthcare industries concerning change of employment, compensation, severance negotiations, investigations and other employment-related issues.

James also represents corporations and individuals charged with federal and state crimes, focusing on securities and financial transactions, including insider trading, money laundering, and wire/mail fraud, among others. James draws on his investigative experience to assist in pre-indictment defense and internal investigations concerning corporate and “We are pleased to be able to offer our clients the caliber of skill and experience that James brings to the firm. His expertise in litigation, employment and white collar defense and investigations will be a tremendous asset. James is the most recent of a number of impressive attorneys to join our firm in the last twelve months validating the fact that sophisticated clients and their attorneys view Barton as a high employee criminal conduct, theft of trade secrets and also acts as liaison to law enforcement agencies when corporations uncover employee or agency illegality.

Prior to attending law school, as a Special Agent for the United States, James was responsible for conducting international criminal and regulatory investigations, as well as assisting U.S. Attorney Offices in trial preparation. After September 11, 2001, he transferred to the newly created Department of Homeland Security in a counter-terrorism capacity.
